Keynote Address

Bonnie Driggers, R.N., M.S., M.P.A., is assistant professor emeritus at the Oregon Health Sciences University (OHSU), Schools of Nursing and Medicine in Portland. For several years, she served as director of clinical teaching systems and programs for the OHSU School of Nursing and as co-director of the OHSU Simulation and Clinical Learning Center. In these roles she has worked in partnership with the Oregon Consortium for Nursing Education (OCNE), OHSU and others to design interdisciplinary clinical learning opportunities utilizing simulation as an adjunct to clinical experiences that support the competencies required for health care practitioners.

Ms. Driggers is a founding member, immediate past chair and current governing council member of the Oregon Simulation Alliance, a statewide network of simulation facilities. With Dr. Michael Seropian, she co-authored the “Oregon Simulation Readiness Report” which presented a comprehensive look at desire and readiness for simulation education in Oregon. As chair of the education committee for the Oregon Nurse Leadership Council and as an executive committee member of the Regional Nursing Clinical Placement Workgroup, Ms. Driggers is involved in additional collaborative projects which focus on health care education in Oregon. Keynote Address (cont.)
Ms. Driggers most recently served as the co-director of the OCNE Clinical Education Model Project which focused on the redesign of clinical education in nursing. For several years she has been faculty for the post master’s in nursing education simulation course. Dr. Seropian and Ms. Driggers provide consultation throughout the United States, Canada and overseas in the areas of simulation education, program development and implementation. Prior to her faculty roles, she served in a variety of management and administrative roles at OHSU Hospital, including two years as the interim chief nurse executive and associate director for patient care services. She currently serves as a member of the board of trustees for Salem Hospital Regional Health Services.

The keynote presentation will showcase ways in which simulation can be used to train nursing and allied health students as well as health care professionals. In addition, the following concurrent educational sessions and simulation demonstrations will be repeated four times throughout the day:

Break-out Sessions/Demos

Educational break-out:
- Finding funding and partnerships for simulators and simulation labs
- Resources available for developing and implementing scenarios
- Recipes and “how-to’s” for bringing simulation to life
- The “how-to’s” of participant debriefing and staff evaluation

Simulation demos:
- Shock
- OB
- Basic nursing assessment
- CODE/ACLS
- Post-Op
